

CSA Items and Quantity* - Garden of Eve 2004-2006 Seasons

* as best reconstructed from available records

Note from the farm: You can follow the weather trend from cool to hot to cool over the harvest season by noticing which vegetables are delivered. The season starts with a lot of greens and peas (June-July), moves to hot-weather crops like tomatoes, eggplant, and peppers (August-Sept), and on to storage crops like potatoes, onions, sweet potatoes and winter squash in October.

It is interesting to compare the difference between the three seasons. 2004 had a much warmer spring so hot-weather crops like tomatoes, eggplant, and peppers arrived in August, almost a month earlier than in 2005. However the fall of 2005 was warm, and we were able to deliver large quantities of tomatoes and basil every week from the beginning of September until the end of October! 2006 had an unusually long tomato season, from July through October, with a heat wave that killed greens in late August and some semi-catastrophic rains around Labor Day, that cracked and rotted all the tomatoes in the field at that time.

Each year we also experiment with new varieties of vegetables, for example new in 2005 were fennel, dandelion greens, Chinese cabbage, shell peas, and new kinds of winter squash and herbs. New in 2006 were sweet corn, more green beans, celery root and rutabaga, as well as more herbs and chiles. Goals for 2007 are to supply more carrots and winter squash.
